The Residence

accommodation at I Corbezzoli is laid out over two floors, in a house of serious architectural pedigree and a classic example of the aesthetics in vogue on the Costa Smeralda in the 1960s.

Attention to detail, an unerring dedication to bespoke design and a passion for local craftsmanship are in evidence throughout: carved wooden doors, cabinetry and wardrobes unite each space, while handmade ceramics appear in the kitchen, the bathrooms and on the staircase risers. Lofty white ceilings rest on dark wooden beams above deep-hued polished floors; iron window grilles, multi-dimensional terracotta roofs and sculptural chimney tops complete the picture.

Two reception rooms run along the front of the ground floor, both looking out across the gardens to the sea. A voluminous living room gathers rattan settees around a coffee table and flows by French doors onto the surrounding terraces, while the convivial dining room opens to the main terrace.
